- Marking standards - Kevin
 - #1 marking of large diameter pipes - 2 against and 3 for at vote but will pass 4 to 2 and will move forward with an additional marking
 - Discussed what defines large diameter pipe? What symbol or marking will be used? Will keep group posted as information comes in
 - #2 Add clarification language that will indicate what is already covered in ORC
 - #3 Majority voted and yellow will be added to excavator manual
 - #4 voted to approve this
 - #5
 - Vita - the items up for discussion would include votes from each DPC. Is that correct? Chuck says it's been talked about and Vita disagrees. Kevin asked for people to reach out to him, and no one did.
 - Chuck what are you questions Vita? Vita - is this just gas? does their mapping show how big a pipe is? or is it assumptions? Kevin - that's basic marking standards you have to mark the size or its assumed <2". ownership size and material is normal marking standards. Vita - There are lots more to be discussed before voting all the way through passage for #1 and #2

- Chuck and Kevin say we've already voted. Vita says the minutes reflect that we did not vote and we need to. Chuck said lets vote then
- Voting discussion led by Vita
 - discussion about pros and cons of #1
 - Someone (I don't know who) was talking about being against more markings
 - Jess from dominion is against #1
 - motion for additional marking (#1) raise hand - 0 vote yes 10 vote 1 abstain
 - #2 and #3 no vote needed because it is already in the law they are just adding to best practices manual
 - #4 – Chuck or Kevin state this one was our idea so should pass - 11 voted yes to add 0 votes no abstain
 - #5 no vote needed because it is already in the law they are just adding to best practices manual
- Other
 - Vita wants a committee to go over how to better communicate to companies. Gives example of claim dig-in.
- Motion to adjourn meeting ended 11:10
